Hidden Signals: Studying nonverbal and paraverbal trajectories as a means to understand clinical interactions

Measuring nonverbal behaviors across video recorded patient-physician interactions and assessing their associations with patient and physician sociodemographics and attitudes and interaction outcomes.

Dr. Hamel is a communication and organizational behavior scholar conducting research in healthcare organizations generally and the oncology setting specifically. Her research is focused on improving clinical communication between patients and providers.

10 – 11 am on Friday, February 23, 2018
College of Journalism and Communications, Weimer Hall 3032
Space is limited, please RSVP to llylyr@jou.ufl.edu by Wednesday, February 21st.