Free Career Development Toolkit for Researchers

Whatever stage you are at in your postdoctoral career, you need to give yourself the opportunity to step back from the demands of daily work to analyse and review your career to date. After all, working continuously across research contracts can be a powerful barrier to career development.

This complimentary toolkit is aimed at postdoctoral researchers who have gained one to two years' experience in academic research. You may be at a point at which you are considering your overall career progress and development in academia or be contemplating a career change. This toolkit offers some general starting points for those wanting to reflect on their career to date and to begin to formulate an ongoing career strategy.
