Gainesville-Alachua Life Science Professionals - Event on January 26th

Register today to attend the NE Gainesville-Alachua Chapter of BioFlorida event on January 26th from 5:00 - 7:30 p.m. at Swamp Head Brewery. Last year this event was well attended by local bioscience industry representatives, so it's an excellent opportunity (in a relaxed, fun environment) to network and make connections!

Join us for a unique Facility Tour and Networking event with your regional life science colleagues Thursday, January 26th from 5:00 pm to 7:30 pm. Hear from the director of the UF Sid Martin Biotechnology Institute Mark S. Long and go behind the scenes of Swamp Head's brewing operation and observe the beer-making process in the context of biomanufacturing! Also, meet the Leadership Team of the Northeast Chapter of BioFlorida.

Get involved. Experience the Value.

LOCATION

Swamp Head Brewery

3650 SW 42nd Ave.

Gainesville, FL 32608

Into the Open: What Animals Can Teach Us about Death

Wednesday, 1 February - 7:00 pm

Millhopper Branch Library, Alachua County Library District

Jessica Pierce (Bio-ethicist, Writer, Religious Studies Scholar)

What we can learn about death, and about caring for those who are nearing the end of life, from our experiences with animals? The simple answer: A lot! This talk will explore what kinds of “death awareness” animals might possess, and will look at some fascinating reports of death-related behavior, including grieving, in both wild and domesticated animals. We’ll also examine human cultural, psychological and moral attitudes toward and practices related to animal death, focusing particularly on the death of companion species such as dogs and cats, and on the growing field of veterinary hospice and palliative care. Here we find a rich source of insight on caring for dying animals, and also a useful comparative ground thinking about our own death and the death of our human loved ones.

This event is free and open to the public.

Friday, February 3 - Making the Right Moves - Research Management Series

Obtaining & Negotiating a Faculty Position

February 3, 2017

Noon to 1:00 pm

Communicore Room C1-11

Presented by: L. Jeannine Brady, PhD

As you go through your postdoctoral training, you will be thinking about the next step in your research career. If you are considering a faculty position at a university or medical center, you will have to decide whether a tenure-track or nontenure-track position is better suited to your personal goals and ambitions. Although both may be rewarding, this seminar will focus on the tenure-track faculty appointment. As you embark on your search, you will face a series of challenging questions: What do I want and need from my job? How do I go about finding a job? How can I ensure that my achievements and capabilities will be recognized? How will I choose among the offers I receive? How can I ensure that the resources I need to launch my career are included in the job package? This seminar will explore well-tested strategies for finding and obtaining the right academic appointment.

Scholarly Communications Workshops - Spring 2017

The following scholarly communications workshops will be offered in Marston Science Library L136 and Library West Room 212 and during the Spring semester. Each workshop is one hour in length.

For registration and additional information, please visit http://bit.ly/UF\_ScholComm. If you have questions, contact Christine Fruin at christine.fruin@uflib.ufl.edu or (352) 273-2710.

Copyright Essentials for the Graduate Researcher

Working on your thesis or dissertation and including copyrighted works of others in your paper? Confused about the publication and deposit options available to you for your dissertation and wondering what impact these options will have on later publication of your work? This workshop will answer these common copyright questions that graduate students encounter as they write and prepare to publish their own thesis or dissertation. This workshop is a must for all graduate students working on a thesis or dissertation.

Marston Science Library L136: January 10 at 1:30 pm

Library West 212: January 13 at 9:30 am

Authors' Rights and Responsibilities: Understanding Copyright & Open Access in Modern Scholarly Publishing

In this workshop, attendees will learn about the legal relationships between author, publisher and reader in order to understand how to protect one's own intellectual property rights as authors, to respect others' rights, and to interpret common provisions in publisher agreements. Additionally, we will review the strengths and weaknesses of various publishing models including open access and best practices for locating and evaluating open access publication venues.

Marston Science Library L136: February 1 at 1:30 pm

Library West 212: February 2 at 12:30 pm

Can I Use That? Fair Use for Teaching

Can you show a movie in class? Can you distribute copies of an article? What are you allowed to post on your Canvas site? This workshop focuses on the application of the copyright exception of fair use to teaching activities. Participants will learn about the four factors of fair use, application of fair use to various types and uses of materials, and how the library can help with electronic reserves and links to subscription materials. This workshop is intended for teaching faculty, instructors and graduate assistants.

Marston Science Library L136: February 20 at 1:30 pm

Library West 212: February 24 at 9:30 am

UF Dropbox Service Expanded

The UF Dropbox for Education service has been expanded. Initially launched in May, 2016 for faculty, the free service is now available to all faculty, postdocs, and staff. With up to 1 TB of storage available, Dropbox is an excellent, secure way to share files for academic, administrative, and research purposes across campus or across the world, using the same interface and functionalities everyone is accustomed to using.

Visit www.it.ufl.edu/gatorcloud and click on the link atop the left column to establish a free UF Dropbox for Education account.

The Dropbox for Education service is approved by the Information Security Office as a file-sharing tool. The Standard for working with Restricted and Sensitive data applies when using Dropbox for Education. Please check with your local IT manager if you have any questions about the appropriateness of using Dropbox with the file(s) you want to share. If no local IT manager is available then contact the UF Computing Help Desk before uploading a file that might contain data classified as Restricted or Sensitive.

Anyone needing assistance in establishing their free Dropbox account may contact the Help Desk at 392-352-HELP/4357.
