UF Postdoc Editors Association

The Office of Postdoctoral Affairs is conducting a survey to measure interest for and feasibility to establish a postdoctoral editing group. The “UF Postdoctoral Editors Association” would be comprised of postdoctoral associates and fellows and sponsored by the Office of Postdoctoral Affairs. This group will enhance scholarly communication by assisting postdoctoral authors with editing of written documents for language usage, punctuation, and organization. This service will be most advantageous to postdoctoral scholars for whom English is a second language, but the service will be open and free to all postdoctoral associates and fellows at the University of Florida. Our goal will be to facilitate postdoc-mentor interactions during the writing process by minimizing time spent on basic writing skills. Our volunteer editors would primarily review submissions for clarity of meaning; we would offer no or minimal scientific review of manuscripts because this content should reflect critical thinking of the postdoctoral scholar and their mentor(s).

Please complete this short survey to indicate interest or to volunteer:

Personal Branding for Scientists

May 17, 2017

4:30 - 6:00 p.m.
3320 Reitz Union

Register to Attend!

PRESENTER: Thierry Dubroca, Ph.D., Postdoctoral Associate, National High Magnetic Field Laboratory

This workshop will cover the importance of personal branding and offer practical self-promotion techniques for scientists. First, we will cover how to develop a theme and/or an independent professional identity before addressing how to communicate it online and in person for one’s benefit. We will also cover how to choose your theme/professional identity before finishing the presentation part of this workshop with best practices, and practical tools which you can use regularly to promote yourself.

Personal branding is a very important skill to master. It allows you to communicate who you are professionally, that you are independent, own your presentations, ideas, publications and more generally your work. It is a way to set you apart from your doctoral advisor, postdoc supervisor and develop your own scientific and professional identity. It is critical to build your own professional image and it is extremely useful when looking for your next position. Having an established theme and/or professional identity set you ahead of the competition when hiring committees or managers look for the best candidate.

The majority of this workshop will be in the form of exercises, where attendees will be asked to interact with one another and discuss particular points related to personal branding, such as networking, practicing your elevator pitch, creating or discussing your online profile (Linkedin, Researchgate), online presence (Google search, personal website), how to promote yourself using your publications, get more citations, and more!

Summer 2017 - UF Humanities Grant/Fellowship Proposal Review Opportunity

Faculty, staff, and students in the humanities and humanistic social sciences are invited to submit complete, polished draft proposals (minus reference letters) for single-blind review by an interdisciplinary panel of three UF referees with experience serving on national grant review panels. Participants will receive detailed comments and suggestions on how to strengthen the proposals for a particular funding opportunity.

- To participate, RSVP to Dr. Sophia K. Acord (skacord@ufl.edu) by 16 June 2017.
- Complete, well-polished grant/fellowship proposals are due 23 June 2017.
- Feedback from three reviewers will be returned 10 July 2017.

This proposal review opportunity is limited to 15 participants. Individuals are welcome to participate even if they have participated in past opportunities, but in the case of over-subscription preference will be given to new participants. The entire proposal review is conducted over email.

More information can be found here or by emailing humanities-center@ufl.edu.

This opportunity is organized by the UF Center for the Humanities and the Public Sphere, with support from the CLAS Dean’s Office and UF Office of Research.
